Projects

NHL Shot Data Analytics Capstone

August 2025 – December 2025

- Developed an Expected Goals (xG) Model using XGBoost and Random Forest 2023-2025 shot-level data
- Engineered features, identified key predictors, conducted exploratory data analysis, and performed model testing and evaluation
- Identified distance, angle, and individual skill to be the strongest predictors of goal probability, demonstrated that nonlinear models significantly outperform linear models, where 7% of shot attempts become goals

NHL Playoff Performance Prediction on Detroit Red Wings

Spring 2024

- Analyzed 2023-2024 NHL play-by-play data using R to evaluate team discipline, defensive impact, power-play efficiency, and scoring trends through data wrangling, visualization, and comparative league analysis
- Built shot plots and team performance metrics to identify key areas for improvement and translated findings into actionable recommendations for Detroit Red Wings playoff qualification
- Quantified the statistical gaps between Detroit and playoff teams, prioritizing special team efficiency and shot suppression to improve postseason probability
- Access to data analytics and software projects available on GitHub: GitPortfolio
